God's Function
Truth

By James McGuire

Can one calculate Lies as a function of time from constant lying using the formula:
"L (final) = L (initial) + a (average) t." Final lie = equals the initial lie (L) plus the average acceleration of lies (a) multiplied by time (t). Acceleration of lies (a), [Lack of Law]
With a little algebra rearrangement one gets a kinematic equation for lying as a function of time:

Simplified: L (final) = 2012; L (final) = L (initial, 1) + a (2011) * t for a fixed place in time.

The function of L (final) depends upon the accuracy of L (initial) + U (unknown lies).

Maybe our little formula should be better written as:

Now to calculate truth: "Truth (final) = Truth (initial) + a (average) t." Truth (TR, final) = equals the initial Truth (TR1) plus the average acceleration of Truth (a) multiplied by time (t).

Truth (initial) = infinity, therefore Truth (final) = infinity.

Note: one very important function was overlooked in both formulas, V (velocity of knowledge). In the truth formula, V would not change the final results.

2011 years ago (V initial) = sandal power via donkey carriage, a message being carried by one man to the many. Today, (V final) = (V initial) + (VM modern day nanosecond communications).

This author would speculate that all of mans computers and brainpower would not match the computing power of God.
